

"Mt. Helix" Popular Name for New High on University

C C Deplores Delay in Fund Allocation

Lewis F. Smith, District Superintendent of Grossmont Union High School, was a guest at the directors' meeting of the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening. Mr. Smith informed the directors that the Board of Trustees of the high school is always interested in trying to meet the desires of the communities in the district. Concerning the naming of the new high school which is to be built on University avenue and which will serve the Lemon Grove area, Mr. Smith suggested that the Chamber recommend a name of geographical significance. The Chamber Board approved the name "Mt. Helix High School" and the president was requested to advise the Board of Trustees.

Urges Allocation Haste

The Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution directed to Governor Warren protesting the slowness and the method of allocation of state money for school buildings, voted in the $250 million bond issue of November 1949, said allocations to be made to alleviate the serious housing conditions. Copies of this resolution were ordered sent to the Governor, the Department of Finance, and the State Allocation Board. The Chamber urges all individuals and organizations to send similar communications to Governor Warren at Sacramento.

In the absence of Fire Commissioner Monell, President Dorman reported that bids on the $35,000 bonds of the Lemon Grove Fire Protection District will be opened at the August 9 meeting of the Commissioners, and he also stated that the first year's budget for the Fire District has been formally submitted to the Board of Supervisors.

Director Hill, chairman of the civic and special events committee, reported plans for the Powwow fiesta to be presented August 17, 18 and 19, with particular mention of the parade on Thursday, August 17, at 6:30 p. m.

Seek Traffic Signals

Correspondence was read from E. E. Wallace of the State Division of Highways concerning a request by the Chamber for installation of traffic control signals at Massachusetts and Broadway. Mr. Wallace stated that a spot check will be made and if conditions warrant it the intersection will be repositioned on the demand list to effect an early consideration for construction of signals.

The president read a letter from Claud J. Hupp of the Department of Public Works, concerning recent recommendations of the Chamber road committee, pertaining to necessary tree and shrub trimming. A. F. Sonka, committee chairman, reported that the work requested had been accomplished.

A letter from E. R. Offenbecker, traffic engineer of the County Road Commissioners' office, was read regarding an addition to the arterial street system of Lemon Grove. The route "North Avenue and Waite Drive from the west line of Imperial Avenue to the east line of Massachusetts" has been designated as a through street, and stop signs have been ordered for all streets entering this route. Director Mulder gave a preliminary report on Christmas plans and it was decided to invite all organizations to an early meeting to discuss Christmas decorations, program and the community tree.

Adventists General Conference Attracted Group From Here

Pledged to channel every activity of the church into a new surge of evangelism, Seventh-day Adventists are returning this week to their homes in all parts of the world from their international conference in San Francisco.

Attendance at the 12-day session, according to reports given the church here by Charles H. Betz, local pastor, broke all San Francisco convention records for a single day on each of the Saturdays, when more than 21,000 people crowded into Sabbath services held in the civic auditorium, the Fox theatre and the Memorial opera house. Daily attendance ranged from 5000 to 7000, including overseas delegates from 68 countries, among them many national leaders.

Dominating the conference program, Pastor Betz told members here, was the idea that the gospel of Christ must be quickly carried to every nation on earth. Colorful and spectacular panoramas staged daily by foreign delegations featured world-wide needs and opportunities, and portrayed tremendous gains made by the church everywhere.

Rella's Observe 2nd Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rella of Rella's Shoe Store, 7850 Broadway, have been in Lemon Grove for two years, and to show their appreciation for the support given them they are having an anniversary sale and selling all summer shoes at a substantial discount. Read their ad. on page 5.

Ralph Rella, who was born in Italy, started to learn shoe making as an apprentice at the age of nine years. He finished his training under masters of the trade in Naples and when 15 years of age owned his own shoe shop where he made shoes for babies, children and adults.

Ralph read much and heard from others of America, the land of opportunity, and when 18 years of age, bidding farewell to parents, brothers and sisters, came on the great adventure.

He located in New York City and worked in large shoe factories filling orders for hand made shoes. Here he met the lovely Miss Anne Belluscio whom he married.

Ralph attended night school studied diligently to be naturalized and in 1928 became a citizen of his adopted country, America.

Mr. and Mrs. Rella and their three little children came to San Diego in 1946 and established a shoe repairing business on Fifth Avenue.

Two years ago they built a double store building on Broadway and moved into one side. They have since put in a large stock of new shoes, Mrs. Rella having charge of that department.

The greatest concern of the Rella's right now is to find a house to rent in Lemon Grove so that they can move here to be nearer work and their school and church of St. John's.

New Diesel Pulls Heavy Freights Over Nebo Grade

The San Diego and Arizona Eastern has been trying out a new diesel locomotive built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works on the local line the past week.

Saturday the locomotive pulled the heaviest load ever to pass over the Nebo grade from North avenue to the old quarry, which is the steepest portion of the line between San Diego terminal and El Cajon.

Comparable loads have always required two steam locomotives, but the diesel walked right over the hill without undue effort.

Company officials have announced that the diesel is here on trial, and will become a permanent fixture if it proves itself.

One thing, it certainly will put an end to the greasy smoke which pours into local stores when the old timer stands at the Broadway crossing, and will eliminate the fire hazard along the right of way.

Later—Tuesday morning two steam locomotives were back on the job.

Truck Crashes Into Avalon Cafe

A large truck loaded with sugar crashed into the side wall of the Avalon Cafe at Imperial and Golden avenue Saturday, tearing a large hole in the building.

The crash knocked over the refrigerator, just seconds after Mrs. MacQueen had closed the door and turned away from it.

A hay truck careened down Mt. Vernon Monday, crashing through several yards, toppling fences and straining baled hay along the way.

Crusade for Freedom Aimed at Combating Communism

Completion of a plan whereby the American people can effectively take up the cudgels against Communism has been announced by General Lucius Clay, American military governor in Germany during the Berlin airlift and now national chairman of the Crusade for Freedom Committee.

The committee, composed of national leaders in all walks of life, will spearhead a civilian attack on the communistic forces that are now trying to engulf the world. Independent of government educational and propaganda efforts, it will nevertheless co-ordinate fully with the government's war on communistic ideology both at home and abroad.

President Truman, in giving approval, has written Gen. Clay, "I hope that all Americans will join with you in dedicating themselves to this critical struggle for men's minds."

Details of the Crusade for Freedom program were approved yesterday at a conference in Chicago, at which Clay also announced the appointment of regional chairmen throughout the country. Among his appointees is L. M. Giannini, San

"It is vitally important that we step up our campaign of truth to blast this false propaganda, to demonstrate before the world our true aims of freedom and friendship for all peoples. This is the purpose of the Crusade for Freedom."

SHORT STORY

Detective Peters

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

ORION DIDN'T look like a detective. He realized this for a fact when the girl with the chestnut brown hair came up and spoke to him.

"You're Orion Peters, aren't you?" Mrs. Keith told me. I'm June Ingalls. It's going to be a gorgeous wedding, don't you think? Have you seen the swimming pool yet?"

3-Minute Fiction

Orion knew at once because of her easy informality she had mistaken him for one of the guests. And suddenly he decided to go on with the game.

"Hello," he said cheerfully. "It's nice to see you again. No, I haven't seen the pool. Is it new? Shall we go look at it together?"

They went and looked at it. In fact they swam in it.

They stayed near the pool for almost two hours. At the end of that time Orion came to two decisions. First, he decided that the girl was the loveliest, most beautiful creature he'd ever known. Second, he decided he was a fool. At first this business of pretending to be a guest smacked of a lark. Now it was different. He was falling in love.

He went back to his room and changed into his tux. He'd have to go down and keep his eyes on things and avoid June Ingalls, if he could.

He took up a station within observation distance of the table where the gifts were placed and acted as much like a guest as he knew how. June was not among the crowd that milled around the living room. He was convincing himself that he was glad of this, when a feminine voice behind him said:

"Why, Mr. Peters, you're standing here like a statue. I mean, shouldn't we dance, or something?"

"I'm dreadfully sorry," he said. "I hurt my ankle in the pool this afternoon. I'm afraid dancing's out for me."

"Oh, how wretched! Is there anything I can do? I mean, oughtn't you to see a doctor, or something?"

JUST THEN Orion's desperate glance fell on the table where lay the gifts. There was a man standing at one end talking to a woman. The woman had a fan, which she maneuvered skillfully. Behind his ruffled folds the man to whom she was talking suddenly darted out a hand, scooped up something on the table, and thrust it beneath the tails of his coat.

Orion came back to earth with a jolt. He started toward the man, who was moving through the crowd toward the terrace door. He caught up with the fellow just as they got outside and fell into step beside him.

"All right," said Orion when they reached the end of the terrace. "Take it easy and you won't get hurt. You're under arrest."

The man looked at him quickly. Orion didn't have time to lift his arms in defense. Something struck him a terrible blow on the head. He swayed, caught himself, glimpsed the thief racing down the steps.

Orion anticipated the direction of the man he was chasing by leaping the fish pond and making a flying tackle at the fellow's legs. They went down in a heap.

When he opened his eyes there

Orion decided that the girl was the loveliest, most beautiful creature he'd ever known. He heard snatches of conversation and guessed that the thief had been captured and everybody thought that he, Orion, was quite a hero. Then he knew that his head was pillowed on something soft. He saw a face bending over him.

"Well, that settles it, I guess," he grinned. "Now you know. But I'm not really a detective. I go to law school nights and detect days and week-ends."

"It doesn't make a particle of difference," June told him. "I'm Mrs. Keith's secretary. She asked me to see that you were looked out for. Can I help it if you thought I was a guest? And now that you know the truth, I suppose you don't like me any more?"

"Suppose," said Orion, "you let me ask a question."

She agreed and he asked it and she blushed as she said, "Yes."

Crusade for Freedom

Freedom, in which all American citizens will be invited to take part during the month of September.

The symbol of the Crusade, Clay said, is a great new Freedom Bell which was cast yesterday in Crofton, London, birthplace of our Liberty Bell. Eight feet high and weighing 10 tons, the Freedom Bell bears the inscription, "That this World, Under God, Shall Have a New Birth of Freedom," a paraphrase of Lincoln's words at Gettysburg.

The Freedom Bell will be dedicated in inspiring ceremonies behind the Iron Curtain, in Berlin, as a tribute to those who today are giving their lives in the struggle for human freedom. It will stand, also, as a permanent symbol of the free world's determination to triumph over totalitarian tyranny and oppression wherever they appear on earth.

Later, consideration will be given to the casting of a similar bell for erection in Korea, to ring for freedom in the Eastern world.

By enrolling in the Freedom Crusade, Clay pointed out, each individual citizen will be discharging a measure of his personal responsibility for leadership in the world today. He will be bringing a message of sympathy and encouragement to millions of oppressed peoples under the heel of Communism overseas.

Each person enrolling in the Crusade will sign a statement of belief in the cause of world freedom. His name will be taken to Berlin for the bell dedication ceremonies in late October, and will become a permanent part of the Freedom Shrine there. "Our goal is to take the names of millions of Americans to Berlin for this event," Clay said.

The Crusade for Freedom and the Freedom Bell dedication will have deep religious significance. World church leaders will be present to emphasize the truth that all human rights are derived from God, that freedom has its foundation in faith, and that personal liberty is impossible in a godless society.

The first clasp of the Freedom Bell will be carried by radio to all the free peoples of the earth. Simultaneously, bells will ring out all over America: church bells, city hall bells, school bells. Throughout Western Europe, also, bells will be rung. Behind the Iron Curtain they will appear scrawled on walls.

The Crusade for Freedom will also offer Americans from coast to coast an opportunity to contribute to the support of Radio Free Europe, a new broadcast station in Western Germany erected and operated by a group of public-spirited U. S. citizens. In this group, known as the National Committee for a Free Europe, are such leaders as General Eisenhower and Clay, former Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, Senator Herbert H. Lehman, William Green, William L. Clayton, James A. Farley, and others. Radio Free Europe pierces the Iron Curtain and brings the story of freedom and hope to the Communist-dominated peoples of Eastern Europe. Unhindered by governmental restrictions, it hits with a Sunday propaganda punch, frequently making use of exiled leaders from the prisoner countries to carry the message of freedom back to their own peoples.

While the primary purpose of the Crusade is to demonstrate that the American people are morally behind this voice of freedom, it is also hoped that small contributions from many Americans will make it financially possible to expand the present facilities of Radio Free Europe into a network of from five to eight freedom stations.

"By enrolling in the Crusade and supporting Radio Free Europe," Clay said, "each American citizen will be demonstrating in a very practical way his personal participation in a great cause."

"The Korean crisis demonstrates, more clearly than ever, Soviet determination to destroy freedom throughout the world. Today American soldiers, sailors and airmen are engaged in stopping military forces equipped with Soviet armor and trained in Soviet tactics. Concurrently there continues throughout the world the Soviet effort to extend Communism through the capture of men's minds and loyalties."

"The President has urged Congress to give increased appropriations to resist this type of Communist effort and to keep alive in men's hearts everywhere the desire to be free. As an important supplement to governmental effort, the President has called for the assistance and action of private citizens in stamping out the lies and misrepresentations of the Communists. It is our hope and belief that the Crusade for Freedom will very quickly become a powerful civilian arm in the war of ideas. Designed to enlist millions of Americans behind Radio Free Europe, it will also give backing to future operations in Asia. Radio Free Europe will not duplicate the Voice of America as the latter now exists or is augmented. It is not the voice of our government, but the

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

All This Ex-Boxer Wants Now Is Peace and a Bit of Pinochle

By BILLY ROSE

One of the more off-color characters around Broadway these days is Kid Herman, ex-great of the prize ring, who runs the newsstand on the southwest corner of 42nd street and Times Square. The Kid, according to the record books, lost only once in 140 professional bouts and was one of the few men to beat Benny Leonard. What's more, he is reputed to have been as scrappy outside the ring as in during his black-and-blue period.

Today, a muscle-bound 56, he likes to think of himself as "a stick of sugar-coated Gandhi." "Me and the world has seen too much fightin'," he told me the other night. "All I want now is peace and a little pinochle."

While we were talking, as if on cue, a man rushing for the subway bumped into the ex-pug.

"Sorry, Mister," apologized Herman. "If I'd known you was comin' I'da barked a cake."

The man's glare relaxed into a grin.

"I coulda flattened him with a punch," said the Kid, "but what would it prove? Ya never convince anybody by hittin' him. It's better to go along with people. F'rinstance, take the gink who runs the newsstand across the way—Patsy White. Used to be a great fighter. Had a string of 14 straight knockouts till he met up with me. I knocked him down 15 times in 10 rounds, but the first time Patsy heard me tellin' about it, he said it was only 14 times. So the next time I told it, just to make him feel good, I said it was 14 times, but Patsy says, 'Who you kiddin'?' It was 13. Well, every time he hears me tellin' it he gives off another knockdown, so finally I says to him, 'Okay, let's leave it this way. Mosta the time you was fightin' me from a horizontal position.'"

JUST THEN, as if he knew we were talking about him, Patsy waved from across the street and yelled, "How's it goin', Kid?" "Come on over an' get yer name in the papers," Herman yelled back at him.

"In a minute," said Patsy. "Under the arch!"

"What does he mean, under the arch?" I asked.

"It's a private joke we got," said the Kid. "When we were kids we lived near the Brooklyn Bridge, and when we didn't want to do our fightin' where the cops could see us, we used to say, 'Meetin' under the arch,' and then go under the bridge and independent voice of American citizens, speaking strongly in the cause of freedom to the prisoner peoples of Europe. It is a people to people communication."

On last April 26, announcement was made of General Clay's leadership of the Crusade for Freedom, and formation of a nationwide organization was begun. At that time Clay said: "What an inspiration of hope and encouragement it would be to oppressed peoples everywhere if millions of Americans would voluntarily join in a great moral crusade, would accept the challenge of personal leadership, and pledge themselves to work steadfastly until human freedom for all men is a reality and lasting peace becomes possible! Such a spiritual airlift, originating in the heart-land of liberty, would be the first step in putting the free world on the offensive."

All of the said work hereinbefore generally described shall be constructed in the manner, at the locations, within the limits, of the materials, and of the dimensions as shown upon and in accordance with the plans, profiles, drawings, typical cross-sections and specifications thereof, bearing project number 324-13 contained in Document No. 12287, on file in the office of the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors of San Diego County, and copies of which are on file in the office of Jean L. Vincenz, Engineer of said Sanitation District, and by this reference thereto all said plans, profiles, drawings, typical cross-sections and specifications are made a part hereof.

The said Board of Directors determined that aerial bonds extending over a period of nine years from the second day of January next succeeding the next October fifteenth following their date bearing interest at the rate of six percent per annum, shall be issued to represent assessments of twenty-five dollars or more for the expense of said work and improvement, as provided by the Improvement Act of 1911, and amendments thereto.

The costs and expenses of said work and improvement are to be assessed upon the district which is more particularly described in said Resolution of Intention.

The Sanitation District Engineer's estimate of the total cost and expenses of the proposed improvement is $4,663.79.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday, the 14th day of August, 1950, at 11:00 o'clock a. m., in the Board of Supervisor's chamber in the City and County Administration Building, 1600 Pacific Highway, in the City of San settle things late and square. By the time I was 10, I musta slugged it out with every punk in the neighborhood — all except Patsy.

"Then a few years ago, after we both set up stands on Times Square, some bad blood comes up between me and Patsy for the first time. The way it happens, one day I order two bundles of papers instead of one, and when the truck delivers them they forget to drop off the regular one for Patsy. So naturally he thinks one of my two bundles is for him and when he comes over to get it I tell him it's mine. Well, one word leads to another, so finally I says, 'Under the arch.'"

"That's for me," says Patsy, so we pile in a cab and drive downtown.

"MY WIND AIN'T what it used to be, but I musta knocked him down half a dozen times before it hits me how crazy it is for a couple of near grandfathers to be beatin' each other's brains out. So I drop my hands and say, 'I just remembered somethin'! I meant to order two bundles but forgot to do it, so you was right the whole time. Let me buy ya a steak and make it up to ya.'"

"Lucky ya remembered," Patsy said, "because I was just gettin' warmed up. I'll buy the beers."

As I was about to go, Patsy White came across the street and the Kid introduced us.

"I was just tellin' my friend," he said, "how we go under the arch and I knock you down six times."

"You remember wrong," said Patsy. "It was only five."

"I meant five," apologized Herman.

"See what I mean?" he said after Patsy had gone back to his stand. "Next time it'll be four. And after that, three. But what's the dif? It makes him feel good and it's no skin off my nose."

GUARD YOUR VOTE—REGISTER

Every Californian 21 and over should draw a circle around November 7 on the calendar. In many respects it will be the most important election day of the decade.

This year, in addition to the usual importance of casting ballots for candidates and of voting either for or against ballot measures that affect the welfare of every person in the State, the Legislature that is elected will have a great deal to say concerning the political destiny of California for some time to come. For once the national census is completed, Congress will reapportion seats in the House of Representatives among the States on the basis of population gained or lost in the last 10 years. California probably will be awarded seven or eight new congressmen—and it will be the duty of the Legislature to realign California's congressional districts and decide the boundaries for areas which will be given additional congressional representation.

The importance of reapportionment of California's congressional districts is obvious—and the importance of electing men or women to the Legislature who will carry out the task on a fair and equitable basis cannot be over emphasized. But remember no matter how important the election may be, you can't vote if you aren't registered. Don't forget—don't delay—register today!

MOVE OVER NEW YORK

One hundred years ago, a primitive outpost of civilization. Today, the second State in the Nation. That's our California, population 10,472,348.

Recording the most phenomenal growth spurt—52 percent, ever tallied by any State in a single decade in America, California has brushed aside Pennsylvania, number two state for 130 years. Undoubtedly the people of any other State would have been flabbergasted by such an increase. But to Californians, a people who have become accustomed to Golden State record-breaking of all kinds, our fantastic population increase was merely expected!

Move over, New York! The future holds a glowing promise for California!

MODERN MIRACLES

Living in a land of technological miracles, most Californians accepted as news from Moss Landing in Monterey County last week with complete aplomb—a huge new plant went into operation that will soon be able to produce 402,000 horsepower of electricity. Isn't this America?

Yet this latest plant of the State's power industry is capable of producing more energy annually than the average output of the highly-touted government-built Shasta and Keswick Dam plants combined. It will also return $375,000 per year to Monterey County in taxes—not to mention its return to State and national tax coffers—while government plants, built with tax money, don't pay taxes.

Even the physical facts of the Moss Landing power plant are enough to open one's eyes to the wonders of modern-day life. Its main powerhouse building is a turbine hall the length of one and a half football fields. Each of its six boilers reach as high as an eight-story building—and heat steam about twice as hot as do some of the Yellowstone geysers. The plant's turbine spins at such speed that if it were an automobile tire it could roll to New York in three hours and 15 minutes.

Hollywood, it may be true, glorified the colossal, stupendous and impossible—but the new power plant at Moss Landing is ample evidence that the accomplishments of American business are as fabulous as anything Hollywood can put on film.

Political Parade

CLEM WHITAKER, Jr.

Cradled high in the mighty Sierra Nevada Range, along the California-Nevada border is the shimmering awe-inspiring jewel that is Lake Tahoe.

Mother Nature must have been in a grandly generous mood when she created Tahoe—a vacation wonderland with everything at hand.

To this truly magnificent setting, man has made his additions, but none so prominent as the casinos at each end of the Lake, some just over the California line in Nevada and others straddling the line. Cal-Neva, The Stateline Club, The Nevada Club, The Wagon Wheel, in all of them, with the Lake as a softening background, you can bet your head off—and it's all legal.

The fact that the Clubs are all in business and thriving would seem to be evidence that you can't win. But you can bet.

With Proposition No. 6, on the November 7, General Election ballot, set to throw California wide open to gambling if approved by the voters, the Nevada case is interesting. Particularly at Tahoe—for there certainly, in an expensive atmosphere and with lovely surroundings, gambling is on a high plane.

(California proponents of Proposition No. 6 uphold "legalized" gambling, as in Nevada, as the method of "controlling" gambling evils.)

What about the argument? Take a Saturday night at the South end of the Lake as an example. Business is booming. There aren't even parking places except a half mile down the road from the nearest club.

From the casinos comes a rolling, never-ending roar like from surf when you're some distance away—slot machines, inside, it's mobbed. At the tables, under blazing neon, men and women, rich and poor, with avid interest, are watching and playing the games of their choice. Police wander around from room to room.

Despite "No Minors" signs tacked on walls, teenagers skip from slot machine to slot machine. Occasionally mothers with youngsters in arms walk down the line, dropping nickels in the slots, the young ones pulling the handles. In side rooms men sit restlessly scanning race results, preparing for the next day's play.

The atmosphere is charged, the lure of something for nothing spurs the crowd on, the games roll with fascinating speed.

Outside again and slipping back across the California border, the feeling of tenseness begins to roll away like fog under a hot sun. The spell of Tahoe and its majestic grandeur takes hold. You suddenly find it's a relief to be in California, free of the gripping influence of professional gambling.

Talks and Walks With Mother Nature

BY TRIXIE TREGANZA

GOLDEN EAGLE AQUILA CHRYSAETOS

Because of the racial weakness for symbols and striking generalization, we have been taught that the Golden Eagle is the embodiment of all regal qualities, including courage, magnanimity and valor in defense of offspring. There is some foundation for all of this. In his mountain home the majestic flight of the eagle truly befits the grandeur of the scene. Cradled on a beetling cliff and schooled in the clouds, it is little wonder that the Eagle should become for us the symbol of both prowess and aspiration. Even in captivity there is something awful about his piercing eye, and the unrest of the royal captive appeals to all that is chivalrous in our natures.

But the reputation of the Eagle race, quite as in the case of our own, has been made by a few individuals, and their feats are a revelation of the possibilities inherent in the breed rather than chapters from common life. Never shall I forget the pained disappointment over my first Eagle's nest. The situation was romantic enough—a ledge of rock some 350 feet up the side of the gulch, and 75 feet clear of the talus below.

At the time of my first visit, on a May 18th, the nest contained two eaglets about six weeks old. Armed with a stout birchen staff, I worked my way over to a secure footing within a dozen feet of the nest. The remaining distance was a nasty bit of climbing, and I preferred to wait the first onslaught of the outraged parents where there would be some chance of defense. Fudge! The first eaglet appeared once or twice in the middle distance, but paid no more attention to the peril of its offspring than if I had been a Magpie coveting the crumbs from the royal table.

Three weeks later I revisited the nest and put the eaglets to flight. One of the old birds came up and superintended the gliding downhill of the less capable child, but seeing her safely upon the ground, immediately went away marmot hunting in perfect unconcern. If there is one bird above another of a gentle and unsuspecting nature, I judge the Golden Eagle to be that bird. But this also is a hasty generalization.

Whereas generations of gunfire have taught the Eagle gun-fear some respect for mankind, there is no doubt that their innate ferocity, goaded by hunger, still impels them to daring feats wherever their natural prey is concerned. Not only do the Eagles capture foxes, raccoons, and all other creatures capable of corner campu of the larger animals, sheep, goats and even bucks.

A case is recorded where a Golden Eagle attacked a four-point white tailed deer, as it was floundering in the snows, and killed it by sinking their talons deeply into its back.

Fawns frequently fall victim to the Eagle's claw, and a successful attack of this sort often involves keeping the mother deer at bay. It is for this reason that Eagles hunt in pairs, and I have been told, on what I consider good authority, that calves are sometimes killed by the combined ferocity and cunning of a robber team. In such a case, one bird devotes itself to distracting the mother cow by an aggressive mien by hectoring and swooping, or by actual buffets of the wings. The Eagle's mate is meanwhile pulling down the calf, and the two birds feast when the mother's sorrow has been forgotten.

Of course the Eagles often subsist upon plainer fare. Rabbits, ground squirrels and spermophiles are consumed in enormous quantities, sometimes to the decided benefit of local agriculture, and sometimes the birds descend to snakes, lizards and the lowly rat. Marmots are great favorites in the northern hilly sections, whereas in more open country the birds take up the pursuit of grouse or waterfowl.

It will then be difficult for us to make out a brief in defense of this royal bird. Certainly we cannot do so upon economic grounds. But there is rather blood enough in all of us to make us cry "Brother" when we hear the Eagle scream.

It is envy and wicked folly, and not just vengeance, which leads us to strike down this winged presence of the mountains, this watcher of the deserts, and fearless companion of the sun. It is good to have something with red blood among us, or over us. And it takes expensive food to sustain such quality. Let him have it. What are grouse and ducks and rabbits, fawns, even before the dignity of this majestic symbol. I'll take Eagles myself.

California is the ancient citadel and heart's home of the Golden Eagle. Although this storied bird occupies, or has occupied, the major portion of the northern hemisphere, it is probable that the Eagle was a little more abundant a generation ago in west central and Southern California than it was anywhere else on earth.

Its threatened disappearance within this generation has been brought about by two factors, first, the insatiable use of firearms and second, the precautions

FROM THE NEWS CIRCUIT
JAMES DORAIS

At a recent meeting in Berkeley, which received far less public attention than its importance deserved, representatives of various State agencies were invited by the President's Water Resources Policy Commission to present the official views of the State or California on the formation of a national water resources policy.

California had a great deal to say on the subject. The official report, submitted by Director of Public Works C. H. Purcell, is a comprehensive, 104 page document.

It would be impossible, in a brief space, to summarize the findings and recommendations contained in the report. In the main, however, the report is critical of the lack of uniformity of unity of purpose and of want of common standards in present Federal water resources policies and in the administration of those policies by Federal agencies.

The report calls attention to the growing tendency on the part of the Federal government to bypass State and local agencies and is highly critical of the TVA-type of regional authority which arbitrarily assumes many powers properly belonging to the States. A prime requirement of a uniform Federal water policy, the report makes clear, should be that local water rights and State laws governing those rights be fully respected.

In his introduction to the report, Mr. Purcell points out that California—an arid state whose entire growth has been dependent upon judicious use of its water resources—is particularly well qualified to make recommendations on national water development.

About one-quarter of all the irrigated land in the United States is in California. This State uses far more water for domestic, industrial and irrigation purposes than any other State in the Union.

Most of California's irrigation projects and all of its municipal water developments have been built and paid for by local public agencies within the State, under policies that have been established over the years by adaptation of State Constitutional provisions, acts of the Legislature and court decisions.

When it is considered that California's cash farm income has been greater than any other State's during 15 of the past 20 years, it is apparent that California has done an excellent job of husbanding and developing the water resources on which the bulk of its agricultural prosperity depends.

It is only natural that Federal policies that tend to hamper California's progress or conflict with local objectives should be opposed. Thus the State report criticizes such examples of harmful Federal intervention as the Bureau of Reclamation's insistence on retaining permanent title to water it develops within the State and its refusal to deviate from arbitrary acreage limitation policies not applicable to local California conditions.

To the President's Commission, the California report should prove of invaluable help.

Dorothy Finley is Lovely Bride

Large baskets of white Shasta daisies and gladioli against green foliage decorated the chancel of Central Congregational Church, La Mesa, for the candlelight wedding of Dorothy Jeanne Finley and Arthur A. Hauer.

Rev. Alex Milmine read the vows at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening in the presence of 135 guests. At the close of the ceremony, the church choir sang the Benediction.

Dorothy Jeanne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finley, 6820 Central avenue, chose a gown of white satin with a long train of lace tiers. Her fingertip net veil was a taria of lace and pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of roses and orchids.

Lemon Grove Is White Spot

The Sheriff's office of San Diego county, which covers 4840 square miles of territory, with a personnel of only 120 men and women, so Lt. Bill Wood told the Kiwanis Club Monday noon.

The Kiwanis Club, meeting at Civic Center, heard the Lieutenant tell of the inner workings of the Sheriff's office.

He said that there is a constable stationed in each township and in case of emergency is aided by additional help from the downtown office. The constable, he said, is more or less the backbone of the organization.

The county jails accommodates 200 to 250 residents all the time he said.

The bailiffs of the eight courts are under the direction of the County Sheriff's office.

Touching on the subject of delinquency Lt. Wood said that 10 years ago the officers around the Sheriff's office shuddered at the mention of Lemon Grove, but today it is one of the white spots of the county.

Next Monday the Kiwanians will hear a word about socialized medicine when Dr. Paul Shea, brother of the president of the club, Dr. Peter Shea, speaks on "Physio-Medicine."

Able Architect Passes Here

During the past week, at St. Andrews Episcopal Church in La Mesa, memorial services were held for Russell Ray, well-known architect of Lemon Grove. He had resided here since 1944 at 7831 Palm Avenue.

Mr. Ray was a member of the San Diego Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and also of the California Council of Architects. He had recently been made a Member Emeritus of the American Institute of Architects. He had received many honor awards in recognition of his work. The beautiful residence of Mrs. Marvin McCray on Ha-Hana Road in Lakeside, and Friendship Hall of the Lemon Grove Community Congregational Church are among Mr. Ray's local work.

For the greater part of his life, Mr. Ray lived in Santa Barbara where many beautiful residences and public buildings of which he was the architect add to the charm of that city. He was also the architect of outstanding residences in Hollywood, Westwood, Los Angeles and San Gabriel and other Southland cities. He was a founder of the Santa Barbara Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

Mr. Ray was a graduate of Lake Forest College, Illinois, and Harvard University. During World War I he was an Army Lieutenant in charge of the Architectural Drafting Rooms in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Ray is survived by his wife, the former Mary Esther Jackson of Pasadena and Hinsdale, Illinois, and by his brother, Prescott H. Ray of Santa Barbara.

Interment was held at Ft. Rosecrans National Cemetery on Point Loma.

Van Gilse donated the fish, all caught by Van Gilse on rod and reel during this summer, and Ted and Ralph provided the "know how" of cooking and donated the salad and rolls. SHORT STORY

Annette Passes Out

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

IN SEPTEMBER Bill decided he wasn't in love. He told himself it had been a summer romance. He regretted it. He couldn't walk out and leave Annette flat. He had to offer some sort of explanation.

The wind whipped in their faces as the roadster sped through the night. Annette snuggled contentedly at his shoulder.

He swung the roadster off the highway. They bumped along a wagon road, presently emerging into a clearing. Bill stopped. Toward the north the horizon was illuminated by a dull glow. Lights from the town.

Bill turned. Annette said: "Oh, Bill, I'm so glad we came out here. It was here you first told me you loved me. Remember?"

"Sure, I remember."

"Say it now, Bill. Say you love me!"

Bill had intended to say just the opposite. Without knowing why, he pitted her. He spoke, but what he said was: "Of course I love you. You know that. It was as if she impelled him to say it."

"Kiss me, Bill. Kiss me and say it again."

He kissed her, repeating the words, cursing himself for doing so. Why did she have to cling to him so?

He got a grip on himself. He formed the words in his mind. "Bill, I've got a surprise for you."

"Surprise?"

"I'm going back to Belfast with you. I've got a job there for the winter. We'll be together all winter. Bill, isn't it grand?"

Lord! Now he was in for it. He hadn't expected that. Well, he'd have to be blunt, cruel. He'd have to tell her once and for all.

"ILL!" There was terror in her lone. He turned quickly. She was looking away from him toward the horizon where the dull glow had been. The dull glow he had thought to be town lights had developed into astonishing brilliance.

"Fire! The whole ridge is ablaze. Say, we'd better get going!"

He jammed his foot down on the starter. The motor whirled, and that was all. Bill swore, yanking out the choke. There was a sputtering whine, a cough, silence.

Bill opened the roadster's door. "Come on! Engine's dead. We'll have to run for it."

He yanked her out of the car, started running along the wagon road, dragging her behind him. He hadn't realized that fire could be like this. The speed of its approach amazed him.

"Bill! Wait! You're going too fast."

Bill turned just as she fell forward. He knelt beside her. "Try

"I'm going back to Belfast with you," Annette said. "I've got a job there for the winter."

and get up. We've got to keep going. It's our only chance."

Frantically the tried, sank to the ground, moaning softly. He stooped and lifted her in his arms.

"Bill, don't! You can't! Go on and leave me. There's no use in both of us—"

He went on blindly. Behind him now he could hear the crackle of flames. The road ahead was bright from the brilliance of the fire. It required no effort to move.

Then suddenly, ahead, he saw the main highway. There were lights there. The lights from automobiles and trucks.

Bill lay sprawled in the back seat of a joggling touring car. He opened his eyes and saw Annette. Behind her the sky was dull red.

"Bill, why did you do it? Why didn't you leave me there when—when you knew—"

He said: "Say, what do you take me for? Leave behind the girl I love!"

"Oh, Bill, I've known for a month you didn't! I wouldn't let myself believe I was losing you. I wouldn't give you the chance to tell the truth."

Bill swallowed. So that was it? So that was the reason she had— Suddenly he lifted her in his arms. "Annette," he whispered, "say you love me. Say it, and kiss me, darling."

He swung the roadster off the highway. They bumped along a wagon road, presently emerging into a clearing. Bill stopped. Toward the north the horizon was illuminated by a dull glow. Lights from the town.

Bill turned. Annette said: "Oh, Bill, I'm so glad we came out here. It was here you first told me you loved me. Remember?"

"Sure, I remember."

"Say it now, Bill. Say you love me!"

Bill had intended to say just the opposite. Without knowing why, he pitted her. He spoke, but what he said was: "Of course I love you. You know that. It was as if she impelled him to say it."

"Kiss me, Bill. Kiss me and say it again."

He kissed her, repeating the words, cursing himself for doing so. Why did she have to cling to him so?

He got a grip on himself. He formed the words in his mind. "Bill, I've got a surprise for you."

"Surprise?"

"I'm going back to Belfast with you. I've got a job there for the winter. We'll be together all winter. Bill, isn't it grand?"

Lord! Now he was in for it. He hadn't expected that. Well, he'd have to be blunt, cruel. He'd have to tell her once and for all.

"ILL!" There was terror in her lone. He turned quickly. She was looking away from him toward the horizon where the dull glow had been. The dull glow he had thought to be town lights had developed into astonishing brilliance.

"Fire! The whole ridge is ablaze. Say, we'd better get going!"

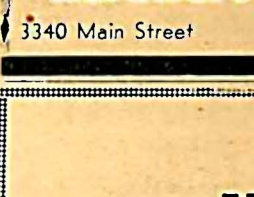

He jammed his foot down on the starter. The motor whirled, and that was all. Bill swore, yanking out the choke. There was a sputtering whine, a cough, silence.

Bill opened the roadster's door. "Come on! Engine's dead. We'll have to run for it."

He yanked her out of the car, started running along the wagon road, dragging her behind him. He hadn't realized that fire could be like this. The speed of its approach amazed him.

"Bill! Wait! You're going too fast."

Bill turned just as she fell forward. He knelt beside her. "Try and get up. We've got to keep going. It's our only chance."

Frantically the tried, sank to the ground, moaning softly. He stooped and lifted her in his arms.

"Bill, don't! You can't! Go on and leave me. There's no use in both of us—"

He went on blindly. Behind him now he could hear the crackle of flames. The road ahead was bright from the brilliance of the fire. It required no effort to move.

Then suddenly, ahead, he saw the main highway. There were lights
